Connie Hudson Leads First Public Poll in Mobile Mayoral Race

MOBILE, Ala. - Mobile County Commissioner Connie Hudson has emerged as the frontrunner in the first public poll of the Mobile mayoral race with 41% of the vote, showcasing a commanding lead. The online poll, conducted by WPMI, an independent third-party news organization, recorded 3606 votes over two days, making it one of the most credible initial indicators of voter sentiment in the race.

Hudson's campaign highlights her extensive experience and proven leadership, with a focus on economic development, public safety, and quality-of-life improvements. Her tenure as County Commissioner has been marked by significant achievements, including attracting major employers like Airbus and Amazon and spearheading community projects such as Mobile's soccer complex, aquatics center, and senior centers.

"The poll results confirm what supporters have been saying for months: Connie Hudson is ready to lead on day one," said Aqualyn Kennedy, Hudson Campaign Communications Director. "Connie's proven success in creating jobs, supporting law enforcement, and delivering quality-of-life projects demonstrates her vision to grow Mobile into the city of our dreams. She will continue to show all of Mobile why you can count on Connie."

Hudson's platform emphasizes building new neighborhoods, enhancing public safety, and restoring pride in Mobile. She also aims to continue her work in improving infrastructure and fostering economic growth to create a safer and more vibrant community.

About Connie Hudson:

Connie Hudson has served as a Mobile County Commissioner for 14 years after nine years on the Mobile City Council. A Troy University graduate and longtime Mobile resident, she has dedicated her career to advancing the city's economic opportunities and community development. Hudson is running to succeed outgoing Mayor Sandy Stimpson in the August 26 municipal election.
